Another ho-hum session ...

... as we count down to the US election. I don't know about you, but I'm over the election already!

But despite that, there were some interesting releases overnight!

The big one was the US Q3 GDP release, which saw the US economy expand at an annualised 2.8%, which was below Q2's 3.0% and forecasts at the same level. Digging into the detail, resilient consumer spending accounted for about two-thirds of economic activity, while government spending was also a key driver. The other major US release saw private businesses add 233k workers to their payrolls in October, which was the highest since July 2023, while the September number was also revised higher to 159k.

But while US growth slightly disappointed, it was a completely different story on the other side of the Atlantic with Eurozone Q3 GDP expanding at its strongest growth rate in 2-years, expanding at 0.4% on the quarter and 0.9% on the year, the 'zone's' best performance since the Q1 2023, higher than forecasts at 0.8%, and ahead of the ECB's 0.8% projections for 2024. The German economy expanded at 0.2% to avoid a recession, while the French quickened, lifting from 0.2% to 0.4%.

German annual inflation accelerated to 2.0% in October, its highest level in 3-months and substantially higher than September's 3-1/2 year low at 1.6%. We also had some chit-chat from the ECB with Joachim Nagel stating, "The ECB should remain cautious, and not rush to cut rates. Price stability is not far off, but the last stretch of the road still has to be covered" while Francois Villeroy de Galhau added, "It's too early to declare victory over inflation, but victory is in sight."

The UK budget produced what one would have expected from a traditional Labour government ... tax increases all-round with Chancellor, Rachel Reeves, introducing GBP40bn of tax increases to address a GBP22bn fiscal hole. Key measures include a 1.2% increase in employers' national insurance contributions and a rise in capital gains tax. It is estimated the new measures will increase inflation by 0.4% to a projected 2.6% in 2025, while GDP growth projections were also revised higher to 2.0% in 2025. As a result, gilt yields spiked higher as traders scaled back expectations of BoE rate cuts with the 2-years 6bps higher at 4.32%, while the 10-years reached a 5-month higher at 4.37%.

Australian annual inflation eased to 2.8%, within the RBA's 2.0%-3.0% target range, although the central bank is unlikely to 'fast-track' the cutting cycle given the decline was partly due to temporary government rebates and subsidies, which are set to expire, potentially leading to a resurgence in inflationary pressures in the coming quarters. Core inflation remained elevated as the trimmed mean measure firmed 0.8% in the September quarter.

Summing it all up ...

... US bond markets took their directional bias from the gilt market, with the 2-year treasury yield firming 6bps to be at 4.16%, while the 10-years firmed a modest 1bps to 4.27%. The USD-index saw some profit taking as it retreated to the 104.00 level, which saw the NZD and AUD post modest gains. The EUR was the biggest beneficiary of the weaker USD, while the USD/JPY continues to trade around the 153.25 level. Commodities were broadly positive with oil prices gaining 2.3%, while equity prices also closed in positive territory as the US reporting season portrayed positivity.
